

There's an old camping rule advising people to leave natural areas the same, or better than, they found them.

What a wonderful world we could live in if only we practiced this rule with every place that we visit, and with every person we meet.