Mao's Little Red Book

- The Chinese Communist Party is the core of the Chinese revolution, and its principles are based on Marxism-Leninism. Party criticism should be carried out within the Party.
- The revolution, and the recognition of class and class struggle, are necessary for peasants and the Chinese people to overcome both domestic and foreign enemy elements. This is not a simple, clean, or quick struggle.

War is a continuation of politics, and there are at least two types; just (progressive) and unjust wars, which only serve bourgeois interests. While no one likes war, we must remain ready to wage just wars against imperialist agitations. .

Slide 21

Mao's Little Red Book

- Fighting is unpleasant, and the people of China would prefer not to do it at all. At the same time, they stand ready to wage a just struggle of self-preservation against reactionary elements, both foreign and domestic.
- China's road to modernization will be built on the principles of diligence and frugality. Nor will it be legitimate to relax if, 50 years later, modernization is realized on a mass scale.

- A communist must be selfless, with the interests of the masses at heart. He must also possess a largeness of mind, as well as a practical, far-sighted mindset.
- Women represent a great productive force in China, and equality among the sexes is one of the goals of communism. The multiple burdens which women must shoulder are to be eased.

Cultural Revolution (1966-1969) Curtural Revolution ("Great Proletarian Cultural Revolution" - Effort to revive interest in Mao's ideas (and for Mao to regain power) after the failed Great Leap Forward - Mao claimed that reactionary bourgeoise elements were taking over the party - Call for youths to engage in post-revolutionary class warfare - Red Guards (consisting of young people) marched throughout China - Older alleged reactionaries removed from positions of power •
